Marketing director	Our clients appear to be generally happy with the service we currently provide, evidenced from a recent client survey undertaken by my department, and they are not demanding anything new from us.
CEO	It is always good to see that the clients appreciate what we do, and I hope the recent security breach does not change that opinion. However, we are not seeing any significant business growth and the increased costs of providing our service means that we are becoming less profitable. We need to do something to improve our performance before the shareholders start to raise concerns.
Commercial director	We will need to consult with a number of influential stakeholders before we make any fundamental changes to our business model or move in a different strategic direction.
Operations director	I agree! The current IaaS infrastructure is complex and difficult to manage on a daily basis. Developing into PaaS or SaaS may look straightforward on paper, but the resourcing, technological and security issues would be very significant and costly. I am not saying it can't be done, but we shouldn't rush into any major decision without fully appraising the impact on our current business operations over the short to medium term.
Finance director	From a purely financial perspective, I am afraid that there are limited funds available to invest in the business should we want to further develop our current business model or attempt something new.
Chair	I know that our institutional shareholders always want to see a higher return on their investment, and they expect better share price performance, particularly as things appear to have deteriorated recently. However, it is also vital that we consider the conflicting demands from different influential stakeholder groups before deciding on our next strategy.
CEO	One way that we could engage with, and become more responsive to, our different stakeholders is by adopting an integrated reporting framework. An integrated report explores how value is created. This helps improve communication as it covers a number of key areas of business performance, called capitals, which are of interest to different stakeholder groups.
Marketing director	I have experience of integrated reporting in my last job, so I would be happy to take the lead on this, particularly as my team are in regular contact with a wide range of NCTech's stakeholders.
Chair	Thank you, that would be most helpful. We look forward to your presentation on integrated reporting at the next board meeting.